Conquer the computer

Being online can make your life easier and better. If you are new to using computers you may think it is too hard, too expensive or not for people like you. You are not alone. Learn why using a computer can be worth the time and effort.

DigitalLearn is a collection of short (6-22 minute) classes that teach you basic computer skills at a time to accomplish important tasks like searching for computer skill at a time to accomplish important tasks like searching for information on a new appliance, buying plane tickets and applying for jobs. Most DigitalLearn classes are offered in English and Spanish.

Start learning computer basics at tcpl.org/digitallearn. If you want personal help getting started, call us at 785-580-4400 or stop by and talk to a librarian. We can help you set up an email address (needed for a DigitalLearn account) and direct you to free in-person classes at the library that support DigitalLearn. If you are ready to jump in on your own but don’t have an email address, DigitalLearn offers a quick online class on creating an email that is linked directly below the email address box on the sign-up page.

DigitalLearn is a program brought to you by COSN, Inc. and Bookshare.org and the American Library Association.

The art of building our community

Your circumstances and environment don’t have to define who or what you are in Topeka Police Officer Timothy Bell’s motto. Bell is one of many community members and representatives from community organizations who are sharing their stories, pictures and objects in the Alice C. Sabatini Gallery exhibit African-Americans Builders of Topeka.

Bell is displaying 34 track and field varsity medals and the story of his work with the OK program, in which African-American men mentor African-American boys through open dialogue and physical activity.

“The medals symbolize how hard work and perseverance can overcome any life’s obstacles,” said Bell. “The medals represent an outward result of inward character. Doing the right thing even when no one is looking. Helping others to succeed through sharing knowledge. Caring and loving your teammates. All of these are traits I carry with me every day to work as I serve my community.”

View more objects, images and the extraordinary stories of African-Americans who helped build and continue to build Topeka and Shawnee County in this exhibit at the Alice C. Sabatini Gallery, Jan 19 – March 17. This exhibit is a collaboration of community members and the library.

Plan your legacy

“...I know that there’s so much more that the library can do through gifts from donors...”

— Haley Dolle The Library Foundation donor

Donations to the foundation also supported the purchase of the Learn & Play Bus, the Sherlock bookmobile and Dolly Parton’s Imagination Library. These are just some recent improvements in library services that have been possible thanks to the support of donors.

The Edward and Mary Wilder Society recognizes donors who have made a planned gift and/or an in-kind lifetime gift to the Library Foundation to support the library. If you would like to learn more, please contact Nancy Lindburg at (785) 580-4493 nlindberg@tscpl.org.

Let’s get your child ready for kindergarten! Children’s first experiences in school can influence the way they relate and learn for the rest of their life. Kindergarten readiness focuses on a child’s physical, social-emotional and cognitive development – rather than just a child’s age. Providing young children with a variety of experiences will help their development and get them ready for school.

We have a special section of books in the Kids Library called School Readiness. There are books on letters, numbers and shapes. We also have wordless books that provide great opportunities for you and your child to tell your own stories. Our children’s library programs, such as Preschool Storytime, Musical Storytime and the Learn & Play Bus are full of songs, stories, movement and rhymes – experiences that will help your child get ready for kindergarten!

Get ready activities

- Let them use safety scissors. This will help develop fine motor skills.
- Play catch to help develop eye/ hand coordination and spend quality time together.
- Read a book together. Ask open-ended questions. Ask your child to tell the story in their own words.
- Play with playdough. Rolling it out and squishing it helps strengthen finger muscles.
- Create a store or restaurant for some dramatic play. Let your child create grocery lists or write down your order at the restaurant.
- Put on a puppet show for the family. Puppets can also help your child’s social-emotional development by giving them a “friend” to talk to or a way to speak to another child without having to directly talk to them.
- Give your child a word, like “cat” and ask them come up with rhyming words using all of the different sounds. But, mat, mat, sat – no-sense words are great, too!

Stay curious
Curiosity is the one thing all library users have in common. We use the library for many different reasons, to learn something new, discuss our next favorite read or answer 100 questions at trivia nights. It’s a good thing to stay curious.

Curiosity is critical to learning and encourages us to explore and discover. (Ever wonder why the sky is blue? That is why libraries feel like home to the curious who read about countries they dream of visiting or those who chuck out a cookbook to try new eats. Curious kids do better in school and adults who are independent learners are more engaged workers when it comes to learning new skills.

“Stay Curious is a philosophy we envision every person in our community adopting,” said Gina Millsap, library CEO. “It’s a lifestyle learning ignited by an endless supply of curiosity. Being recognized as an iconic library in our community, but sparking curiosity within people who we are all about. We’ve updated our mission, community impact goals and core values incorporating these ideas.

New mission: Sparking curiosity and connecting our community through literacy and learning.

Community Impact Goals:
• Everyone will be ready for kindergarten • Everyone will discover their passion for learning • Everyone will continue learning new ways to live their best life • Topeka and Shawnee County will be an engaged community of readers • The library will be a learning organization committed to excellence in leadership, planning, customer focus, process management and partner focus

Why?
You are curious about life and so are we

The library is helping create a community culture of literacy and learning ignited by an endless supply of curious. Being recognized as an iconic library in our community, but sparking curiosity within people who we are all about. We’ve updated our mission, community impact goals and core values incorporating these ideas.
